Cross River Rail is the key to transforming the South East Queensland transport network to fully integrate our road, rail and bus network.

The area surrounding the existing Exhibition station is experiencing rapid residential and commercial development. Currently only open to commuters for major events held at the Brisbane Showgrounds, Cross River Rail will upgrade the existing station, allowing it to become fully operational and open to regular services.

Located in the heart of the RNA residential precinct and within walking distance from the new Herston Quarter development, this station will provide thousands of residents with easy access to the CBD, and a seamless connection to northern, southern, eastern and western rail lines.

Patients, visitors and staff will be able to access the Royal Brisbane and Women's Hospital safer and easier than ever before, with dedicated pedestrian links connecting the station to Bowen Bridge Road.
About the project

Cross River Rail will free up the transport network right across South East Queensland by removing a bottleneck across the Brisbane River. It will get commuters home faster, help to manage population growth and create thousands of jobs.

It will deliver a new 10.2 kilometre rail line between Dutton Park and Bowen Hills, including 5.9 kilometres of tunnel under the Brisbane River and the CBD. New, high capacity stations at four inner city locations and an upgrade of the Exhibition station will provide direct access to more places of work, study and recreation.

With all passenger rail lines using the same four inner city stations and a single CBD rail crossing of the Brisbane River, there’s a serious bottleneck at the core of South East Queensland’s transport system. This bottleneck doesn’t just slow trains right across the rail network; it causes traffic congestion on our roads and slows down our buses too.

We have to do this now to manage growth and preserve our great local lifestyle as South East Queensland grows to almost five million people over the next 25 years. Cross River Rail will create thousands of construction jobs. When it’s up and running, it will provide easier access to jobs, hospitals and other services right across South East Queensland.
